

William Bull

Mr. Denn says thy fiancée, William is nothing, but a lazy Irishman who will cavort and drink spirits, leaving me with a brood of ragamuffins. I will go to him tomorrow and set him straight. Just because William went to Ireland to learn a trade doesn't make him less English or less a gentleman. At least he is a man of his word. I will demand Mr. Denn give me the 100 acres he promised six years ago when he sent me to this settlement like a canary into a mine.
